Larry Kerschberg and Jonathan Bernstein

Abstract

Do you want to be more productive? Of course you do!

The Apple app stores for macOS and iOS are chock full of apps to help you become more productive. For example, under the general category of Productivity, there are many subcategories including: Get Stuff Done; Stay on Task; Take Note; Apps for Writers; Calendars; Collaboration; Communication; Presentations; and Project Management.

So you may ask, what's wrong with using the Apple apps such as Mail, Calendar, Pages, Keynote, Numbers, Photos, and the like? Nothing at all, but developers are coming up with so many new apps that complement, and in many cases surpass, Apple's own apps. This is understandable given that Apple focuses more on hardware, operating systems, and services such as Apple Music and iCloud.

This presentation will explore selected apps for e-Mail, Stay on Task, Apps for writers, as well as Collaboration and Communication. We will have hands-on demos for several standout apps.
